

What makes Johns Creek exceptional?

Olivia Shaffer

The City of Johns Creek is an amazing city with so much to offer, and I am very fortunate to be living within it. Ample parks, diverse population and award-winning schools are just a few of the things that makes living in Johns Creek so exceptional.

One of the reasons I enjoy living in Johns Creek is because of the numerous walking trails and parks that I have access to. These parks allow me to appreciate nature whether I'm with friends, family, or my favorite four-legged friend. Our generation revolves around technology which is great but when I need to get outdoors, it's great to know that there are walking trails, sporting events and community activities available to me. Also, I love being able to have such easy access to places like Webb Bridge Park, Newtown Park and even the walking trail located right at my school. My friends and I sometimes meet on one of these trails and enjoy the scenery as we walk our pets. The various trails around the city symbolize the beauty it has to offer with trees, wildlife and different plants to discover during each visit. I know Johns Creek is committed to providing a place that people of all ages and backgrounds can go to and enjoy as a community.

Diversity is another exceptional quality of my community. I know that some areas in Georgia that aren't as lucky as I am to live in a community where people are able to put aside their culture and beliefs and just respect one another. For example, I attend Taylor Road Middle School. My school has many different religions and ethnicities and I love that we can all come together to learn and to celebrate our differences. In my ELA class, I learned about utopias and dystopias. A utopia is a perfect society and although Johns Creek isn't a utopia one of the things that makes it a perfect community for me is that everyone is encouraged to embrace their uniqueness and appreciate others.

Finally, I believe Johns Creek is an excellent city because of schools like Abbotts Hill Elementary, Taylor Road Middle and Chattahoochee High School. At Taylor Road, we have Fall festivals, football games, field trips you name it and I love being able to attend these things that not every school is fortunate enough to have. I am grateful to have teachers that are eager to teach us and to expand our knowledge every day and to have peers that are so willing to work hard. My incredible teachers and peers have helped me to succeed throughout my years of schooling in Johns Creek schools. Also, knowing that my school is safe helps me to focus on my studies and not on other distractions. I have friends in other cities and they do not enjoy the same conveniences that I have to get a superior education with award winning schools so close to my home.

For the reasons I gave and many more, Johns Creek is a great place to call home. Whether it's visiting Newtown park with my dog or attending the Johns Creek Art Festival with my family, this wonderful city is the perfect place for me to learn, explore and play. There's no place like home in Johns Creek, Georgia.
